SCHOOL ELECTIONS

... have to be placed in the political classification, although it would be much better if politics could stay out of any school system. However, since humans are humans they will inject politics and thus the classification.

In all the excitement of what promises to be whing-ding election year, we have overlooked the fact that on April 1 voters will elect two persons to fill spots on the Hondo Independent School Board. But just because we overlooked it doesn't detract from its importance. Deadline for filing is March 1.

CITY ELECTIONS

... might take on a different hue of excitement if the Citizens for Better Government follow through with plans to file three candidates for City Council. A spokesman Monday night told me that candidates would file.

And I know of others who are seriously considering making the race.

Which means, of course, that all residents of Hondo can now put up or shut up. If they are seriously interested in their city, its government and its future, they can express that interest by voting. If they don't vote, I can't see where they have any right to even come out with a "coffee cup opinion" on how things are run.

Remember to vote in the April 1 election you have to register three days before that.

MORE MEN

... are adding mustaches, like Pete Morales, Sr., Paul Costillo, Margarito Gamboa, Edward Muniz, Frank Garcia, Sr., Roger Ramirez and Gollo Villa.

Some of the regular mustache weavers who just might challenge come Museum Celebration Day May 6 are T. A. Lopez, Fred Bader, Elmo Pope.

Receives award

A Showmanship Award was presented by the Hondo Chapter of Young Farmers at the 1972 Medina County Livestock Show, marking the first time such an award has ever been given in Medina County. Dominguez files for office

Henry Dominguez, a lifetime resident of Hondo and a civil service employee at Kelly AFB, has announced his candidacy for Place No. 1 as a trustee of the Hondo Independent School District.

A 1951 graduate of Hondo High School, Dominguez also completed requirements for graduation in Dec. 1971 from the Logistics Management School, Air Force Institute of Technology, Dayton, Ohio, and is presently attending San Antonio College.

An active participant in this community's civic and welfare programs, Dominguez has worked with the Hondo City Council to familiarize himself with their programs. He has held office in the local Parent-Teacher Association; has been on the executive board of St. John's Catholic Church; is on the board of the Hondo Public Library; is a past commander of Pruned American Legion Post No. 524 and is its present treasurer.

"It has always been my ambition," said Dominguez, "to help serve the youth of our community, to encourage them to continue their education in preparation for their later responsibilities as adults in our changing and challenging world."

"As a concerned parent with children in McDowell Middle School and in Hondo High, I want to take an active part in whatever concerns the welfare of all our students. I believe that I may help to accomplish this

AACOG Committee Says

Low rent housing, re-hab programs said necessary

Housing problems in Medina County crawled a few thousand words nearer fruition Tuesday night; but they have a mountain more to climb before the solution achieves reality.

This was assured when the Medina County Program Committee authorized individual mayors to appoint local committees to study their city's specific housing needs and bring a full report to the next meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, March 21, in the Hondo Municipal Building.

Despite the delay in concrete action, however, many areas of housing as is needed throughout the county were discussed as the committee and interested citizens explored every nook and cranny concerning housing needs.

Chairman Sid Malone turned the meeting over to Alfredo Cervera, Jr., Regional Goals Director, AACOG, who set the theme by asking, "What is the first priority in Medina County in Housing? Is it rentals, homes, rehabilitation?"

County Judge Jerome Decker said, "Low rent housing takes top billing in my opinion. People are living in sub-standard housing and cannot afford to pay for better housing. These are the ones we want to help. And those people who say there is no sub-standard housing in Hondo and the county are either blind or ..."

Tommy Santos said that "concentration should be aimed at low rent area and rehabilitation of present homes, homes that are owned by people who would like to remain in their own homes and on their own property."

Cervera asked if there are many lots in the housing areas that are sub-standard in size, and Ruth Lawler of Castroville said that "zoning should take care of this. But we, too, have people who own their homes on sub-standard size lots in Castroville and they want to stay there. We need a program that will allow them to do so."

T. A. Lopez said that in Hondo "there are many more home owners than renters" and other representatives from the various areas agreed that this holds true over most of the county.

The 235 housing program was brought up and LaCoste representatives said that at the present there are six of these houses in their city and they can't be sold. There are also a few in Hondo that have not been sold and some that have been repossessed.

Tony Garcia pointed out that the basic problem with 235 housing is "that the people cannot afford their prices. If a person has a steady job with fair income he can, but the people we are talking about cannot."

Fred Bader agreed, "We are in need of housing for people who can only afford $15-$18 per month payments."

Sid Malone gave a brief summary of the low rent units Devine has built and said, "there is a lot of good and some bad in such a program, but the end result is that this is one of the best ways to move in helping the people who need help. You have problems like landowners doubling and tripling the price of their property when they find the Federal government is involved. We had to go the condemnation route for our first 38 units. But we improved an unsightly piece of property and are now in the process of building 40 more. We appointed a Housing Authority which is local not Federal and it took the ball and ran. We have helped many families bring up their standard of living."

"Elderly units, and the government will decide what percentage of the units will be for the elderly, should be located as near as possible to the downtown area. These old people have no cars so they must walk to their source of supply, therefore it is almost imperative their units are near the shopping areas."

Mayor George Brucks of Hondo wanted to know if the people utilizing low rent homes in Devine were homeowners or renters prior to moving in, and Malone said

Queen Sylvia, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jose Silva of D'Hanis, was crowned by Congressman Abraham (Chick) Kazen (23rd Congressional District) who made a special trip to attend the gala celebration. Runnersup were Goldie Cortina, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Cortina of Hondo, left, and Mary Elsa Benavidez, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ramiro Benavidez of Hondo. The celebration held at the National Guard Armory attracted hundreds of people who enjoyed dance music by seven bands and the coronation activities.

Natalia seeks county help in law enforcement

Problems in Natalia received joint discussion Monday as Mayor B. C. McDonald and Charles Brown appeared before the Commissioners Court.

"We have lots of problems in Natalia," the Mayor said, "and I know you do too. We want to work with you to help the entire county, and we appreciate the cooperation we have received from Judge Jerome Decker, Commissioner Ira Barron and Raymond Janskowski of the Health Unit."

Mayor McDonald continued: "Our main problem is law enforcement. We need a full time deputy. Burglaries in our town have forced three businesses to fold or quit. And since the last deputy, Earl Howell, decided to move to Devine, we have no one."

"Other problems include the need for a Justice of the Peace court and perhaps a city county office area."

The Mayor also reported Natalia has found four locations for a City-County dump and these have been sent to the Health Department in Austin for approval of the primary location. He also reported the city is working through AACOG on a sewage system and the FHA on housing.

"But our immediate need is law enforcement," he emphasized.

Commissioners voted to provide $100 per month toward salary of a night watchman on a one-year arrangement. "The bonding and deputizing of this man," Judge Decker said, "would be up to Sheriff Hitzfelder. He has to meet with the sheriff's approval."

Judge Decker also explained that re-districting of the county precincts is a waiting final court decisions in a couple of cases. "At that time we will have to complete the re-districting and we will give consideration to placing a JP Court in Natalia."

In other action the Court: Accepted a bid by Jack Winkler Motors on a new car for Commissioner Hilmer Mangold in Precinct

Museum items needed

Ben Wiemers, who was born in Medina County just one year prior to the turn of the century (that would be 1899) stands by an ancient milk separator on display at the Medina County Museum. Wiemers has put in much time keeping the old depot open for visitors over the weekends. Right now he urges anyone who might have an antique item, an old item (or collectable items like the milk cans, insulators, bottles, etc.) if they wish to donate for the Antique Sale, a part of Museum Day Celebration on May 6, to call Fritz Leinweber, 426-3378; Anvil Herald, 426-3346; Frank Graff, 426-2962; or John Wentz, 426-2788. Items will be picked up if necessary.

Letters from the mailbox

Dear Sir:

If you would come up to Quithi and Sturm Hill and talk to the people, you would find out what people think of the test fleet, and also find out the other side of the story concerning the test fleet and what they are doing to our roads. Just let me know when and I will be glad to show you around.

Sincerely yours,

Ralph Maddoux, Capt.
Traffic Law Enforcement
Dear Capt. Maddoux:

I am writing to thank you for your reply to my letter of January, concerning the Automotive Research Associates test fleet in the Quithi and Sturm Hill areas of Medina County.

Since I wrote to you things have only become worse.

If a bunch of teenagers were having drag races on our road something would be done to stop it right away, but nothing is done about the test fleet although they are using our road for a race track.

In your letter you said that there is no law to keep them off the roads.

That may be true, but there is a law against racing on public roads.

There is also a law against destroying public property which is what they are doing to our road, running down wildlife.

There is also a law against knocking down people's fences and forcing them off the road and scaring old people half to death, although I do not qualify on that as I am 31.

Truck licenses go by how much weight is hauled.

Farmers pay half price for farm truck licenses because they use them off the road much of the time.

Should not test cars pay double or triple or more, than the regular car license fee since they carry weight, and are on the road day and night around the clock seven days a week?

You might mention this to the appropriate state officials since there are a number of test fleets operating in Texas this would bring in quite a bit of revenue to the state.

This would also stop certain people from paying disproportionately less license fees than other people do.

If anyone else leaves the scene of an accident without filling out one, they are in trouble.

It is ridiculous that a company can use a public road for a race track and then when people complain they tell you in so many words to go jump in the lake. Again, I want to thank you for the interest you have shown concerning this matter.

Sincerely,
Marvin Lee Niebuhr

Dear Burns:
In a column which on occasion has been devoted to problems and complaints the opportunity of using this space to say "thank you" is greatly appreciated.

On Monday KRME held its Second Anniversary celebration and despite my concern it turned out to be a giant success. But several individuals and groups contributed to that success and I appreciate the chance to say "thank you".

The assistance provided by Sheriff Charles Hitzfelder, his Chief Deputy Floyd Williams, and those reserve officers who worked the dance was both courteous and effective.

A similar salute to Jerry Williamson and his men, many of who worked on their night's off for our benefit.

A special "thanks" to Sgt. Green who during the last few days spent more hours with our staff in getting the armory ready for Monday night's activities than with his own family.

We appreciated all those guests of KRME that were able to attend and to Congressman "Chick" Kazen for taking the time from his busy Washington schedule to come to Hondo, Texas, and be with us on this evening.

Finally, the great bands and groups that appear made our evening the success it was and we appreciated it and I am sure so did those who attended.

There are so many others that gave of their time and efforts who I have not named, but they know who they are and most, I think, know how we appreciated their efforts.

Thanks to everyone.

From,
Jim Fridle

"What do you mean this ranch ain't good for nuthin', it's helpin' to hold the world together, ain't it?"

Farm Bureau consideration by agricultural producers

Today's farmers and ranchers are the producing marvels of the world. As agriculture becomes more and more efficient, fewer and fewer producers are needed to grow our food and fiber.

This efficiency means (1) that more people are free to work in other industries to create the wealth of goods and services that go to make up our high standard of living, and (2) that less of the family's take-home pay is needed to buy groceries.

What it has also meant to producers is overproduction. Because of this, prices for farm products have not risen nearly as much as prices farmers must pay for production and family living items.

Agricultural producers today represent only about five percent of the total population of this country. If farmers and ranchers are ever to have any clout in the marketplace and in places where laws are made affecting their industry, they are going to have to get organized. This is no time for rugged individualism on the farm. It is the time for participation in a responsible organization.

The Medina County Farm Bureau is conducting a countywide drive for members Feb. 14 through Feb. 24. Dues are paid on an annual basis. This means the Farm Bureau must go back to each individual member once a year for renewal of its program. This is a sound approach to organizing. It is perhaps the only way to guarantee that an organization is responsive to its membership.

The Medina County Farm Bureau deserves the active support of all who make their living in agriculture.

Crop residue is important in cropland conservation

Have you noticed how farmers are leaving crop residue on or near the soil surface this year? They are doing it because it is one of the most important conservation practices they can use on cropland. Residue, properly utilized, is as valuable as money in the bank, say Medina Valley Soil and Water Conservation District officials.

Crop residue remaining on the land will help prevent soil erosion from rain and wind. At the same time, it will help condition the land and increase the water holding capacity of the soil. All these things add up to just one thing, more production and profit.

This year is fast coming to a close. Many farmers are trying to complete their conservation practices before the new year gets here. Farm ponds are being built on Harry C. Mueller, Jr., Richard Weynand, Olivia Nester, Paul Mueller, Ralph C. Neuse and Frank Runnels places. These ponds when complete will provide adequate livestock water for a better grassland management program.

Terraces are in the process of being built on Frank W. Jensen place south of Hondo. The terraces, when complete, will provide protection from erosion and store extra moisture for dry years.

Underground plastic pipelines are being installed on Rene and Julius Aelvoet farms, Floyd Santleben, Harry Bros. and Moellere farms. These lines will allow irrigation water to be transported from well to the rows without any waterloss or erosion.

KAZEN IN WASHINGTON

By Abraham Kazen, Jr., M. C.

Food for elderly supported by Cong. Kazen

Final congressional action was given in the House last week to an important step toward meeting a major national problem, food for elderly citizens. Texas is fourth in the nation in population over 60, with almost one and a half million persons in that age group, and too many of these people do not get proper food.

Some lack the income to buy nutritious food. Others lack mobility to get to stores or restaurants. Some are too weak or lonely to make the necessary effort. Providing food, though, is more than an act of mercy. It is an investment for the healthy to see that public costs, such as Medicare federal aid for nursing homes, do not escalate as health care prolongs the lives of our senior citizens.

TEST PROGRAMS PLANNED
The initial program would authorize $100 million to begin pilot projects. Under the legislation, persons would be eligible if they meet one or more of the criteria, which are that they cannot afford to eat adequately, lack skills to plan and prepare balanced meals, have limited mobility, or that they have feelings of rejection or loneliness which keep them from eating properly alone.

The federal government will provide 90% of the costs for the state-supervised plans, which will aim at providing one good meal a day for the eligible. Spouses of qualified people will also be accepted. The plan further provides that persons economically able to pay may participate at fixed fees.

I was pleased to support the legislation, partly because I think it is scandalous for people to go hungry in this country through no fault of theirs, and partly because I see the plan as good preventive medicine.

UNEMPLOYMENT LEVELS
I am deeply concerned about an economic factor that seems to be appearing frequently. It is the suggestion that 6% unemployment is acceptable and, in the thinking of some economists, even desirable. The attitude is based on the theory that inflation is produced by workers' pressure for higher wages, and that there will be less of that pressure if there is less confidence in the supply of jobs.

I accept the realities which say we cannot have total employment, that there will always be handicapped or elderly people who will be unable to work, and there will be some people between jobs. But this new thinking suggests that high unemployment among women and teenagers is not a serious problem. In parts of our district unemployment is much higher than 6%, so I reject complacency or even acceptance of the belief that job scarcity has its benefits to the economy.

That theory comes from those experts whose optimism has been well-described as "a mile wide and an inch deep".

Social Security

QUESTION: I have received monthly social security benefits since January 1971, when I was age 65. However, I refused part B of Medicare. When is the earliest possible date I may have the opportunity to enroll again?

ANSWER: You may enroll anytime during the next general enrollment period. This will be in January, February, and March of 1972. If you enroll at that time, your medical insurance under Medicare will become effective July 1, 1972.

QUESTION: I have been told that I can file for my social security benefits by telephone when I am ready to do it. Is this true?

ANSWER: Yes. The social security administration encourages the use of the telephone for filing for social security benefits. This saves time and effort for you and the social security office.

QUESTION: What does the term "earned income" mean for social security purposes?
ANSWER: Earned income is generally wages or self-employment income for the year in question. Income from interest, rent, other retirement benefits, and sale of real or personal property are not applicable.

Hondo entered in community award project

Two Medina County cities, Hondo and Devine, are among South Texas communities vying for the 1972 Governor's Community Achievement Award.

Six population categories are considered by the judges, using the following criteria for determining the winners: citizen participation, community wide beautification, property improvements, economic development, theme and committee coordination.

The program is sponsored by the Texas Department of Community Affairs, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the South Texas Chamber of Commerce and the other three regional chambers of commerce.

Do you really want your brother-in-law to know how much you earned last year?

Of course not. It's nobody's business but your own.

However, annually millions of taxpayers bear this kind of personal information to people who really shouldn't know. For what? Just so they can save a few dollars doing their income tax.

That's some price to pay.

You see, for only a few dollars more than it costs to do it with any amateur who might not know that work clothes in some instances are deductible, or that income averaging might save tax dollars, you can have your tax return done by a specially trained member of the H & R Block team with complete confidentiality. There are thousands of them in over 6,000 conveniently located offices. H & R Block's fees start at $5 and the average cost was under $12.50 for the 7 million families we served last year.

Furthermore, if your return is audited we will accompany you, at no extra cost, to the Internal Revenue Service and explain how your return was prepared, even though we will not act as your legal representative.

This means that H & R Block is ready to offer you year 'round tax service for just one low fee a year, with no extra charge for audits and estimates. Yes, we cost a little bit more than your relatives or friends or neighbors but when you think of what we deliver, you can't afford anything less than H & R Block.

some were renters, some owners.

"What did you do with the housing they moved from?" Brucks asked. (They were either rented or sold, some were torn down to make room for the new units.) "How do you select the people who live in the units?" (The Housing Authority has guidelines on income and other standards which must be met.)

Cervera said that in scope a Housing Authority can be city, part of a county, county or regional. "Re-hab program are flexible so that homeowners in sub-standard housing cannot be moved out immediately," he said. "Re-hab provides for grants and loans."

Brucks said, "Some people who own homes and don't want to go into a loan arrangement?" And Cervera assured him that many homeowners can get grants for re-hab and they need not be repaid.

"Where do you start?" asked Cervera. "You can start on both programs at the same time. In fact low rent housing fits like a glove with re-hab programs, for you must have some place for families to move into while their homes are being rehabilitated."

Tony Garcia said, "We are talking about programs that will affect many people. Don't you think we should find out what they want. Maybe they don't want any of these."

Brucks said, "In Hondo we don't want to disrupt a lot of people. We want programs which will benefit the most people without disruption. We certainly don't want a program that will go in an area and take people out of their homes. And I feel we have talked to the people for many of them were at various meetings expressing their wishes."

FFA Chapter elects MissWools for candidate

Hondo FFA Chapter II met Monday night with President Dottie Wools presiding over the business session. Plans were made to attend the Area VII FFA meeting to be held in San Antonio on March 11. The chapter elected Miss Wools as a candidate for an area office.

Progress reports on the chapter projects included the reading of a thank you letter from the VA Hospital in Kerrville for the assortment of Christmas cards sent by the group and a report on the local "Secret Granny" project.

Another project adopted by the chapter was to send baked goods to Brooke Army Medical Center in March.

A social hour of games and refreshments followed the business session. Susie Hartung was the lucky winner of the Valentine box of candy.

Decker said he felt the County should get on one program and get started. "We can talk, talk, talk all night and forever and never get anything accomplished."

He expressed an opinion for a county-wide housing authority, but the majority felt that this might prove cumbersome, so they suggested that each city should appoint such an authority.

Fred Rodriguez, former director for the Model Cities program in San Antonio, spoke briefly and said: "It is rewarding to see a group this large with such a sincere interest in bettering your communities and doing so as a committee which can explore all avenues. One suggestion I would have would be to divide into sub-committees and let each study details on a specific housing program. There are so many ways to go no one person can know all the details on all programs. But if sub-committees study specific ones then you have the knowledge to report back to the committee."

"In your thinking on housing I would also suggest that overall you should study a three-prong priority, namely, education, manpower and economical development and housing."

And about there the talking (official) ended to be resumed March 21 when the county-wide committee meets again to hear reports for the various sub-committees.

Sure, he's listening

Judge Jerome Decker and on the right is William E. (Bill) Berger, owner of Radio Station and the Anvil Herald. These four were caught by the photographer Monday night at the KRME birthday party.

Exhibits top calves

The top commercial calves exhibited in the 1972 Medina County Junior Livestock Show February 7-8 was Joseph Nester. His Black Angus earned him the First Place ribbon and helped bring the commercial calves sales total to $3,527.47. This total was for six entries totaling 12 calves. Other winners in this division were Scott Howard of Devine, second; Charles Nester of D'Hanis, third; Chris Heyen and Jim Jordan, both of Hondo, tied for fourth; and David Fohn, fifth. (Photo by Father Victor)

'Peddlers' prove problem

The City of Hondo has some problem with peddlers. Not necessarily with the number of peddlers, although there are quite a few, but with the definition of the word and who all it includes. It seems that some of the 'established peddlers' in town, residents who do the type of business that places them under this classification, don't believe they are peddlers.

But according to the City Ordinance on Solicitors, Peddlers and Distributors (Chapter 17 of the City Book of Ordinances) they are and the City wants to re-emphasize the fact. "We have several persons, we believe, who have been doing the type of selling which places them under this ordinance," City Manager Fritz Leinweber said. "And we would like for them to come by and obtain a permit."

So if anyone now doing business fits the following description of a peddler, he or she should immediately apply for a permit at City Hall:

"The word 'peddler' as used herein shall include any person, whether a resident of the City or not, traveling by foot, wagon, automotive vehicle, or any type of conveyance, from place to place, from house to house, or from street to street, carrying, conveying or transporting goods, wares and merchandise whatever, offering and exposing same for sale, or making sales and delivering articles to purchasers, or who, without traveling from place to place, shall sell or offer the same for sale from any vehicle or conveyance, and further, provided that one who solicits orders and as a separate transaction makes deliveries to purchasers as a part of a scheme or design to evade the provisions of this Chapter shall be deemed a peddler, subject to the provisions of this Chapter."

Other provisions of Chapter 17 are as pertinent as the one described above and are included in an advertisement in this issue of the Anvil Herald. All residents are urged to read the ordinance and comply. "And if anyone comes to your door selling anything," Leinweber said, "challenge them for a permit. If they don't have one, then call City Hall."

Three freshwater records were broken -- for crappie, spotted bass and redbfish. And, all these years, I had not known redbfish belonged to both salt and freshwater.

Claim to the Texas channel catfish record was staked March 7, 1965 when Mrs. Joe L. Cockrell, of Austin, caught a 36½ pounder, 38 inches, in the Pedernales River. Hondo shared her spotlight in the news as she is the former DWYCE CAMERON, daughter of Mrs. Theo Cameron and the late Mr. Cameron.

Dwyce's record remains unchallenged, as recorded on page 58 of the 1972-73 Texas Almanac. Kipling might have had catfish-catching in mind when he wrote "The female of the species is more deadly than the male."

Remember the MEDINA COUNTY WILDLIFE ASSOCIATION? About this time 33 years ago, O. A. FLY was its secretary and was active in promoting the stocking of fish in this area's ponds and streams.

When I migrated to Hondo from Big D in 1961, MCWA was a stimulant to community "togetherness" through its program of conservation and education for the preservation of the wildlife that is so important to Medina County's economy.

As program director and an enthusiastic member, MILTON POEHLER did a fine job and always had something challenging to offer at the monthly meetings. What happened to our old time community spirit?

As a stalwart citizen, a good vo-ag teacher, and a proud father, J. D. SCHMIDT might head the list. But, as a baby-sitter he ain't so hot, sometimes, as the story came to me.

While his son ROBERT was happily amusing himself with his toys, his daddy thought he might get in little shuteye and he was snoozing away when suddenly ... Bong! Something hit him square between the eyes and he awoke to find his son and heir pounding him with a flashlight battery. Where he had found it is still Robert's secret.

ALICE (Mrs. C. J.) PICHOT is of the firm opinion that her father, the late JACOB SAATHOFF was right when he claimed that QUIHI was "the backbone of Medina County" because its residents were sturdy and determined enough to solve their own problems.

When folks complain of too much rain (and sometimes it takes no time at all to forget the long droughts!) Alice recalls the 19-teens when the Pichot family hauled from 12 to 15 barrels of water a day from a neighbor's well more than a mile away to keep their stock alive.

"And were we ever glad to see the spring rains - if and when they finally did come!" says Alice, who still owns some of the family acreage east of Quihi.

Residue such as this is good insurance for lasting moisture. Even more residue would mean more moisture saved from wind and water erosion. No till farming is new, but will prove very valuable as landowners accept the method.

Minimum tillage is new farming system in use

Texas farmers are plowing less and enjoying it more, thanks to a new conservation measure being pushed by the Soil Conservation Service. As a result, there may be less dust in the air you breathe in the Medina Valley Soil Conservation District.

More moisture conservation, higher profits, more free time and less soil loss are some of the benefits to farmers.

"All this is possible because of a new farming system called minimum tillage," Everett Abbott, District Conservationist for the Soil Conservation Service, explained. "With minimum tillage, crops are planted without prior land preparation. Weeds are controlled with herbicides. Since the land is not plowed, leaves and stalks from the previous crop are left on the soil surface as a protective cover during the fall, winter and early spring."

The surface cover is highly effective in preventing erosion. It breaks up the erosive effect of falling raindrops, letting them fall harmlessly onto the surface. The residues also protect the soil from windstorms. Abbott pointed out that wind-blown dust is our state's largest source of air pollution. He also stressed that erosion-produced sediment is our biggest water pollutant, muddying streams and filling natural channels and lakes. Reducing water and air pollution from erosion has vast environmental benefits he said.

"And think what scattered seed and residues left on the surface do for wildlife," Abbott said. "In some farming areas, wildlife are almost entirely dependent upon crop residues for food and cover needed for survival during the winter months. Pheasant, dove, quail, geese, songbirds, deer, turkey, antelope and other wildlife benefit from such practices.

"In fact, widespread use of minimum tillage in Texas would be a great boost to our state's wildlife," he added.

Abbott pointed out that farming operations destroy surface residues. If farmers can substitute herbicides for cultivation in controlling competition, they can reap the many benefits possible from maintaining crop residues on the soil surface year-long.

He emphasized that residues keep the soil cooler in the summer, warmer in the winter. They reduce evaporation, saving valuable soil moisture. The residues protect young seedlings. The cover also produces better soil tilth and it increases in-soak.

He said, however, that many farmers still plow their land over and over again, more from habit and custom than from actual need.

"Farmers have reported eliminating as many as 12 tractor trips across a field in one year with minimum till-

Hondo Scout leads group to Austin

An outstanding Boy Scout from Hondo was among the nine-member group that represented the Alamo Area Council at the annual report to the State ceremony last Friday and Saturday in Austin.

With the council committee was Charles Beard of Troop 192, Hondo. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Beard. There were six youths, Scouts and Explorers, and three adults in the group.

The Alamo Area Council committee joined Scouts and leaders from the 20 councils in Texas to make their report to Gov. Preston Smith. Col. Wilson Speir, director of the Texas Department of Public Safety, was chairman of the report ceremonies for the second consecutive year.

Ceremonies were held in the House chamber of the Capitol at 11:30 a.m. Before the rites, all the Scouts and their leaders marched up Congress Avenue to the Capitol, starting at Second Street.

The Scouts and their leaders spent the evening and night at Bergstrom AFB near Austin. They attended the "Report Breakfast" at the NCO Club at Bergstrom, before going to Austin for the parade and ceremony.

Following the Capitol ceremonies, the Scouts and their leaders toured the Lyndon B. Johnson Library on the University of Texas campus. The Alamo Area Council group were photographed with the governor at the Capitol during the ceremonies.

County students on dean's list

LUBBOCK--A total of 897 students in the College of Business Administration at Texas Tech University qualified for the dean's honor list for the fall semester, according to Dean Jack D. Steele.

Among Medina County students qualifying for the honor list are David R. Schmidt of Hondo and James L. Rotramel of Devine.

To qualify for the honor list, a student must be enrolled in 12 semester hours of courses, excluding pass-fail courses, and have at least a 3.0 grade-point average. Texas Tech uses a 4.0 point grading system.

Local Scouts observe

Scout Week

To kick off Scout Week February 6-12 Troop 219 joined millions of Scouts throughout our nation in attending the church of their choice Scout Sunday, Feb. 6, in uniform.

Boy Scouts of America was founded in 1910 and has tried to encourage the adventurous spirit in boys, along with an appreciation and love of our country. In assisting Troop 219 in the appreciation of the past history of Medina County, John Wentz, local Museum president, presented an interesting program on the history of Medina County to the Scouts.

Good Will bags will be distributed by Scouts in uniform to your front doors soon. Support your Scouting program in this worthwhile project.

Fighting character gives Bob Breiten another chance after polio hits

By Nicholas H. Fohn

On the Friday before Labor Day, 1962, Hondo sized in the summer sun as the community's reliable fire whistle heralded twelve noon. It was lunch time, and a lanky young carpenter paused in his work atop the garage apartment he was half-through roofing. Robert Breiten, Jr., clad in sweaty blue dungarees and a turned-down straw hat, gathered up his tools and scuttled his agile 6-foot frame down a ladder to the ground.

Bob felt strangely ill this morning -- something he was unaccustomed to. Possibly the summer flu coming on, he thought, pitching his hammer noisily into an open tool box. Snapping the lid down tight, he could not foresee that his tools would lie there idle for the next 18 years, nor could he imagine the tragedy that lurked just ahead.

He felt too sick to eat or finish the roof, so he dropped by the doctor's office for a flu prescription on his way home to Dunlay, 10 miles away. But no medicine would quell the complications soon to onset.

Three days later, the mystery malady was diagnosed as low-spinal polio. He almost died of it before reaching a nearby San Antonio hospital. But sparing Bob life itself, the crippling virus claimed its pound of flesh: his breathing muscles were hopelessly paralyzed, as were his legs and feet. Fortunately, the paralysis spared his arms and fingers, but it took all radial thumb movement from his hands. His once powerful shoulders were also left helpless to ever lift his burly arms again.

For two perilous weeks he lingered in coma, precariously close to death in the metal cocoon of a wheezing iron lung.

With the passing crisis, a strange new world confronted him: the prospect of dependence for life's every need, of mental and physical adjustments that if made successfully would promise little more than life itself. But in the iron-lung there was endless time for introspection; time to venture guarded plans for a future his doctors allowed him one day at a time.

We often hear that a man's true character is never really tested or revealed until he is faced with adversity -- that handicaps may be the very means by which we can rise to new, creative levels. Bob Breiten used these means not only to live, but to do again the things that made life worth living. He began a courageous comeback that eventually led to a new career with his carpentry tools.

On a recent June afternoon at his Dunlay farm home, Bob sat pajama clad in a bedside wheelchair, a crew-cut crop of gray hair crowning his slender build. His voice was strong, though occasionally hesitant, as he recalled the event of that twenty-year struggle from iron-lung to work bench. A pressurized Pneumobelt kept him breathing as he spoke. In squeezing pulses, this bladder-lined, nylon corset inflated, then collapsed with compressed air from a sonorously purring electric pump on the floor.

"After about six months at Santa Rosa Hospital in San Antonio -- March, 1963 it was -- they moved me to a special polio hospital in Houston," he said. "That was also my first train ride. I left about 4:00 o'clock one morning in a private Pullman compartment, and laying there while the train clickety-clacked over the rails, I had a real hodge-podge of thoughts. Here I was, going to a strange place -- what's it going to be like? When will I ever come back -- if I'm ever going to come back. Was I going to be doomed to a hospital the rest of my life?"

"I didn't know at the time there might be a chance I'd be sent back home to live a normal life again," he continued. "In San Antonio, everything was pretty much a black picture -- that everything was lost, that everything I'd ever thought of was gone."

When the trip ended at Houston's Southwestern Polio-myelitis Research and Rehabilitation Center, the gloom and despair were soon dispelled. There, a highly competent staff built his confidence. They sought through relentless tests to determine how polio had affected every function of his body. "I was their guinea pig," he chuckled. Occasionally his voice faltered as he spoke. In mid-conversation he would pause momentarily, bobbing his head quickly as if swallowing a gulp of air.

"One thing I learned to do pretty soon after I got there was how to 'frog-breathe'," he continued. "Another patient showed me how, and more than once since then it has literally saved my life. By doing this, I can force more air into my lungs whenever I need it, and expell it out in a burst to cough-up strangling mucus or just to help me talk. To do this, you use your tongue to pump air into your lungs. It takes a lot of practice. While I was down there I taught several others how to do it," he said.

At thirty, Bob was the "old man" in the ward, where most of his fellow patients were in their teens or early twenties. Awe-inspiring courage was commonplace all around him -- as were futility and tears. And there were deaths, too. It was an experience that instilled in Bob Breiten a new insight into the relativity of personal tragedy. It stoked the coals of his will to persevere.

With the help of functional slings and hours of occupational therapy, he learned to feed himself, then to write again -- all without the use of his thumbs.

Now, a new listener drew near his wheelchair. It was Agnes, his stocky brunette wife. To her the story was all too familiar. She had seen both her husband and their 6-year old son, Bobby, stricken and crippled with polio in a single week. Then, rejoicing in her son's recovery, she had watched daily for the same signs of improvement in her husband's condition that never came. Their second son, Clifton, was born while Bob awaited transfer to Houston. And now, with dutiful concern, she shifted Bob's wispy legs into a more comfortable sitting position, as he continued.

"For our entertainment, the ambulance companies in Houston would donate their time to haul us around to rodeos, concerts and what-not. But I would always have them take me home -- to the apartment where Agnes and the boys were living near the hospital," he said. It was just before Christmas, 1963 that the hospital released Bob to rejoin his family there. The doctors and therapists had done all they could, and a waiting list of new patients needed his bed.

"We lived there in the apartment for the next two years, more or less in the shadow of the hospital," he recalled from his pillowed wheelchair. "We had money saved up, and fortunately I'd had insurance and veterans benefits to cover most of my hospital bills. The biggest problem there was boredom. I had nothing to do." Then, Agnes taught me how to do leathercraft, and I had myself a hobby. While I was in the hospital, she had taken some night classes down there to learn how to do it," he said. "I could do the tooling, punching and lacing, but the knife work to cut out the designs in the leather, Agnes did for me."

When the Breitens moved back to their Dunlay farm in September of 1965, Bob soon found a waiting market for his hand-tooled billfolds, belts and purses.

"I made these for about five years," he said, "until I got the country around here saturated. The dum things just never wore out," he chuckled. "There's still billfolds around today that I made back in the fifties."

With this new accomplishment, the useful life he sought was taking shape. But as the years at home drew on, bedroom confinement grew wearisome. He wanted to ride in a car again, to see the events of a changing world he felt was passing him by. So, in 1969, with a carpenter's knowledge of electrical wiring, he showed a local mechanic how to adapt the family car's electrical system to accommodate his Pneumobelt. And it worked.

"That was a real turning point for me," he recalled with a gleam in his steel-blue eyes. "Ever since then, we've been getting out to see things -- mountains, lakes, different towns. Two-hundred miles is nothing for us on a Sunday afternoon."

"We don't visit much though," he continued. "Going someplace to more or less talk, well, that's too much like what I've got here at home. It kinda bothers me too when I do go visit, and somebody says, 'hey, Bob -- did you see ole' Willie Mays catch that fly?' Far as I'm concerned, Willie Mays, he's some kind of doggoned insect exterminator, catching a fly. I don't care for football either. I like to watch auto racing, but not on TV. I like to be there," he emphasized.

Here was the courage of Bob Breiten: to fight back at staggering odds, to shape his own life style around his handicaps.

"I guess you might say I developed a new approach on life during all my time in the hospital," he said. "When I really looked at myself, I found that all along I had been worrying about if I could do something again -- when actually, I needed to think about how to go about it. I couldn't afford the luxury of self pity."

Bob had his real chance to test the mettle of that earthy philosophy in the spring of 1968. There was an enticing article in the latest Popular Mechanics magazine that his son bought to show him -- a how-to story on building an electric guitar.

"When Bobby asked me if I thought I could build one, I told him I guess if some guy's got sense enough to draw it on paper, I ought to be able to find a way to put it on a piece of wood," he recalled.

It was an ambitious task, especially for a paralytic. But Bob was eager to test himself against the tools from a battered box he had never expected to open again.

"First, I drew up a cardboard model from the magazine plans," he explained. "Then Agnes took it to a carpenter friend of mine in Hondo to rough-out on maple boards. Next, I got me a fore-in-hand rasp and used that to round all the corners down and get the neck in proper perspective."

Unable to lift his arms, Bob relied on functional slings to droop his handicapped hands over the work bench that neatly attached to his wheelchair. These aluminum, half-shell cradles hung by elastic cords from a metal cross-beam overhead. They allowed his hands to swing laterally in marionette fashion across the table with appropriate shifts of his torso. After eighteen years, Bob Breiten was again a carpenter.

With the rasping done, he opened a ream of polishing sand paper. Sheet by endless sheet, he pushed and pulled it down the maple grains until weeks later the smooth silken finish met with his discriminating approval. Meanwhile, the Pneumobelt pumped and wheezed through each 3-hour workday.

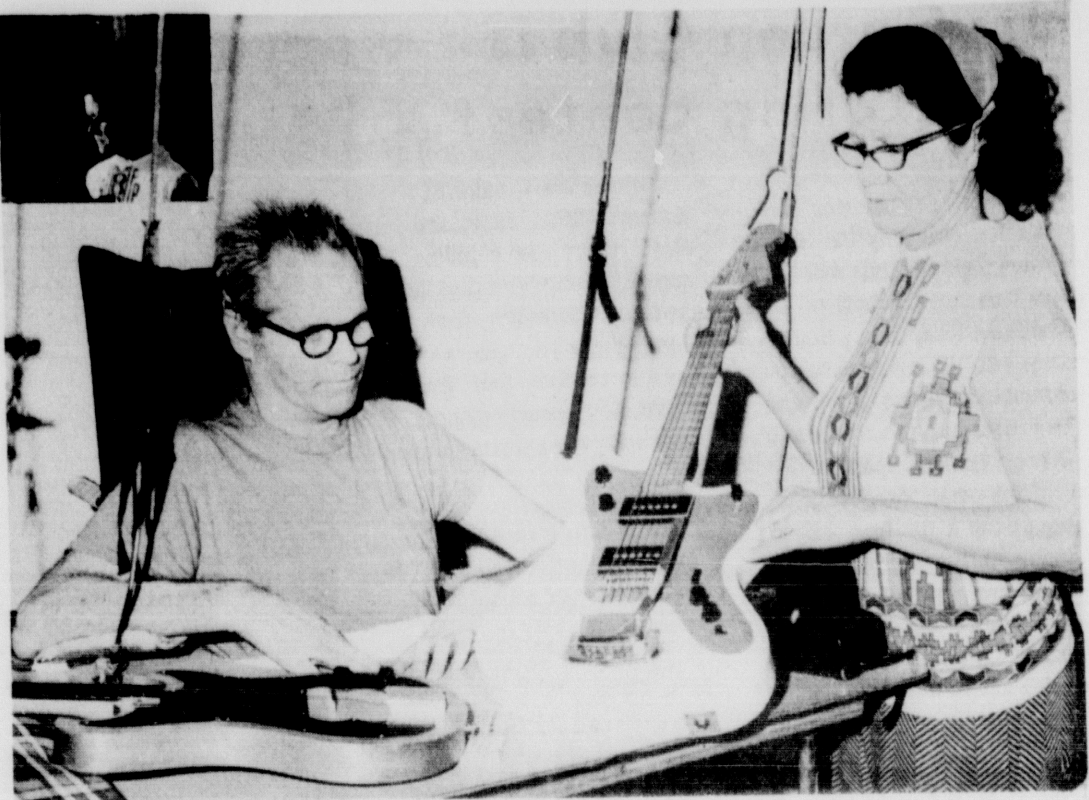

Next, he secured the long tapering neck to the flat, curvaceous guitar body. Then it was time to set the frets. This required measuring precise spacings and inlaying small cross-bars into narrow grooves, sawed just-so across the neck.

"I let Bobby do the sawing," he said, "because I knew that a fret set too shallow or one too deeply embedded would ruin the whole instrument. And Bobby's hands were sure."

This was no defeat for Bob, merely a realistic appraisal of his own capabilities, as before he had passed the knife to Agnes to carve out the leather patterns.

The passing months saw the wood from raw boards gradually become an almost finished guitar, as Bob's palsied hands tediously chisled-out a neat shallow slot in the wood for the amplifier pick-ups. These tiny electro-magnets would electronically reproduce the exact tone of the strummed strings for the amplifier. Carefully, he fit them into the slot just beneath the course of the strings where the pick would strum.

Finally the strings were strung, and the four-month project was pronounced a success -- a day for celebration in the Breiten household. It was not the champagne-pouring kind of rejoicing, but simply the quiet sharing of joy and admiration that reflects a closely-knit family's happiness.

It's been almost three years now since that milestone day in 1968; and since then Bob Breiten has turned professional guitar building under the guidance of Lyle Simms, a respected San Antonio electric guitar craftsman. Simms, who took an early interest in Bob's work after meeting him through a mutual friend, has been a regular visitor to the bedroom workshop ever since. Through his encouragement and helpful pointers, Bob has completed nine instruments. The latest of these are acknowledged by Simms as "every bit up to par with the best."

But all of these electronic music makers are not guitars -- three are banjos, a creation of Breiten ingenuity that combines the customary body of an amplified guitar with the neck of a 5-string banjo. It produces its own unique sound; but not the sound to suit Tillman Yeatts. He's the man Bob credits with the original idea. It came as a request from this Dunlay neighbor and struggling country-music band leader who was seeking a novel sound for his family blue-grass band.

"It sounds more like a steel guitar than a banjo," Yeatts says today, "but it wasn't what I was looking for."

So, what does the future hold for Bob Breiten and his banjo-guitar? On this, Simms and Yeatts will only speculate. They both agree that Breiten's unique creation might have a great potential as a novelty instrument if some big-name musician would pick it up. It just needs some exposure, they say.

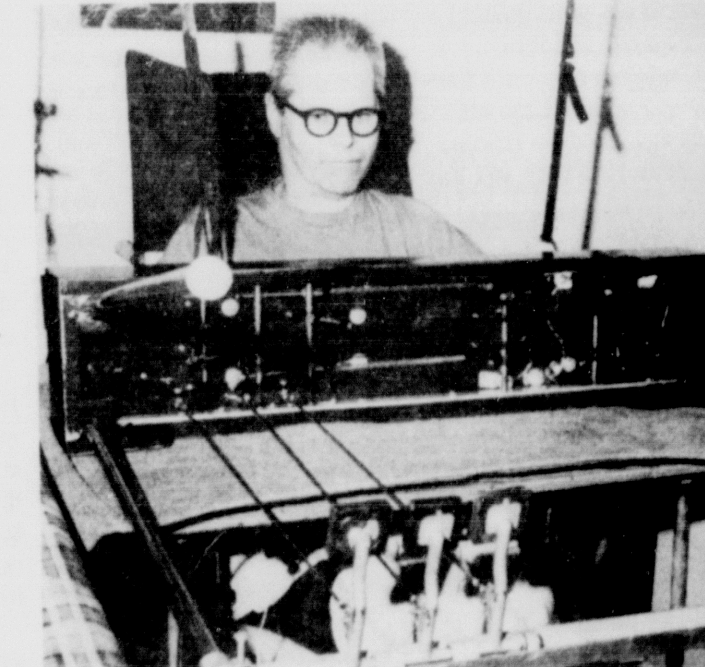

Maybe that hoped for exposure will come someday, and with it fame and fortune for Bob. But all this would just be icing on the cake should it ever occur.

"The money, I'm not too interested in," says the crippled craftsman, "because all along, building these guitars was just something to do. It was a challenge that I could never have met without the help of my family and friends. That's the biggest reward. When you lose the most important thing in life -- and that's your health -- money don't mean a whole hell of a lot."

What really counts is that today, Bob Breiten's long

Attorneys speak on rights, voting, law enforcement

Two San Antonio Chicano attorneys spoke at last week's Hondo Citizens for Better Government regular monthly meeting which attracted more than 80 persons at the Athletic Hall February 10.

Albert Pena, III and Manuel Montez discussed civil rights and polling place rules and procedures.

During a question and answer session at the end of the meeting Pena and Montez described duties of poll watchers, clerks, assistant judges and judges.

Montez said that new legislation permits another voter to assist one who is having difficulty with his or her ballot. Past practice has been that no assistance could be given during actual voting.

They also emphasized that one did not necessarily have to present his registration slip to be allowed to vote. There should be sufficient assistance at the polling place for identifying qualified voters. It is however, preferable to take one's registration receipt as this will help move voters through the polling place more efficiently. All clerks should have access to registered voter lists.

Concerning law enforcement officers, Pena was asked hypothetically if one individual could try to discuss with a patrol officer the legality or practicality of action against another individual and at what point in the discussion would the first individual be interfering with the officer's duties. Pena said, "That is a very thin line," and said this was entirely up to the officer's personality and attitude at the time of the incident.

Albert Pena, III is the son of Bexar County Commissioner Albert Pena, Jr. Manuel Montez is formerly from Carrizo Springs.

Studies approved on loop road system at Medina Lake

AUSTIN--The Texas Highway Commission today approved engineering studies to establish plans for the development of a recreational road system in the Medina Lake area, Bandera and Medina Counties.

The Commissioners Court of Bandera and Medina Counties, supported by the Commissioners Court of Bexar County and the Alamo Area Council of Governments, requested assistance in long-range planning for road development in the area.

Because of the increasing development in the vicinity adjacent to Medina Lake, there is a need for a road system to encircle the lake.

The Texas Highway Department was directed to proceed with planning studies for the development of a system of roads in the Medina Lake area.

Beware! - termite time is here

Spring is just around the corner, which means that termite time will soon be here. That's the time when every home and property owner should be on the lookout for that small but devastatingly persistent insect which costs his unwilling human host millions of dollars.

Spring is the favorite swarming time for termites. What this means is that a group of termites from an established colony breaks away from the "Old Folks" to set up housekeeping on their own.

If that "housekeeping" is in your building, it is likely to cost you plenty of money. You are providing the wood destroyer with all the food he needs and a good place to live.

You are making "life easy" for termites. They are a present and growing danger and the home owner should be on the alert for them.

If you see a swarm of insects which looks like flying ants near your building, call EmpirePest Control 426-3295 and we will come by and check for termites and suggest a program of control if they are present. We are located at 1908 Ave. P in Hondo.

Many Chevrolet dealers are announcing the most complete warranty ever put on a used car. Count your blessings. First, you're protected where it counts most: on the major mechanical parts of the car you buy. And that lasts a healthy 30 days or 2000 miles, whichever comes first. Second, you get special savings on any parts or labor you need. From the day you buy for 24 months. Third, the special savings are good all across the country at most Chevrolet dealers. Say you're on a vacation trip and find you need service. You just get in touch with a participating Chevrolet dealership.

All you do is show an OK warranty identification card you receive when you buy your used car.

Your Chevrolet dealers' new OK warranty. It takes the guesswork out of used car buying.

More about ...  Dominguez

as a member of the school board, if the voters choose to elect me to that responsible post."

Dominguez said that the present Board "has proved its dedication to duty as exemplified in the new buildings and improved facilities which now afford students increased opportunities. All this also adds to our civic pride and is proof of our progress."

Dominguez said he wanted to offer the following personal ideas as suggestions for public consideration:

1. Recognizing the fine
academic programs we now have, I believe that we need to consider the potential of technical training in addition to the present vocational learn-and-earn program. Students who wish to qualify for trades and job skills should be encouraged to prepare themselves accordingly. This should reduce the dropout problem and motivate students to take advantage of the opportunities available to them.
2. We need to encourage community interest and cooperation in our general school programs as recommended by professional advisors and to make available the facilities and personnel needed to achieve these goals.

Dominguez said he would like to meet and talk with school parents and patrons who share the common concern of "what is best for our sons and daughters".

"Let's try to talk things over," he said. "It is my earnest desire to serve the good of our community, remembering that today's students will become tomorrow's leaders. I respectfully solicit your vote and confidence in this effort which concerns us all.

"In anticipation of this,
I thank you and urge you to vote in the School Board election on Saturday, April 1, at the Lacy Gym."

Victory over Poteet ends Hondo Owls 1971-72 season

The Hondo Owls closed their basketball season Tuesday night with an 86-51 win over Poteet at the Hondo gym. The win left the Owls with a District mark of 12-2 and an overall record of 13-3.

Pearsall captured the District crown with a 97-44 win over Southwest and the Mavericks ended the season one game ahead of the Owls. Tom Hill led the Hondo attack in the season finale with 17 points followed by Keith Ligon and Lonnie Knowles with 14 points each. Other Owl scorers were Batteau 9, Grant 8, Abrego 8, Blackshear 6, Wiemers 6, and Weems 4.

Gasch had 17 for Poteet and Goins added 12 points. Hondo led all the way opening up a 42-28 halftime lead.

The Owls also took the

"B" Squad game with a 77-43 victory behind a 23-point effort from Doug Helvey. Raul Rios added 15 Hondo points and Bryan Finger counted 13.

Briones with 22 points and Garza with 18 points accounted for all but three of their teams total. Coach George Ridell's crew added the season with a district mark of 11-1 and an overall record of 12-2.

Owls like trophies

Hondo's Quarter-Finals Champion Owls Saturday night were presented Championship trophies for both District 28-AA and Quarter-Finals. The team captains really like the trophies as this picture will show,

Lone spectator

Riders in the Alamo Trail ride came through Hondo February 8 but apparently everyone was at the Junior Livestock Show--everyone that is except this lone spectator who stands on Highway 90 and watches the chuckwagon pass by. This trailride was one of many that helped open the San Antonio Livestock Show and Rodeo which runs through Sunday, February 20. (Photo by Terri Young)

Williams files as Independent

An additional hat that went into the race for Medina County Sheriff, and not reported last week, was thrown into the Independent circle by Claud L. Williams of Natalia.

Williams, a retired Air Force member, is 40 years old.

In filing as an Independent Williams had to file a letter of intent with County Judge Jerome Decker by February 7. Then after the Second Primary he must obtain signatures on a petition equaling five percent of the registered voters in the last gubernatorial race.
